Reliability Performance Measures: How reliable is travel in the NJTPA region?

Reliability measures indicate how consistent travel time is — on a day-to-day basis — for those using various modes of travel in the NJTPA region.

How reliable are our roads?

This measure is similar to the federal performance measure of roadway reliability and covers the NJTPA region.

It measures the percentage of person-miles traveled that are considered reliable from a travel time perspective for two types of roadways: Interstate highways and all other roadways on the National Highway System (NHS). Other NHS roads include many of the region's urban, suburban, and rural arterials.

This measure is computed using federal data based on probe readings on segments of roadways during 15-minute reporting periods. The measure covers each day of the week, from 6AM to 8PM.

How reliable is transit?

Reliability for public transportation is based on on-time performance, or the ability to adhere to the schedule. (It should be noted that the ability for NJ TRANSIT to adhere to schedules is often affected by external factors, such as weather conditions or traffic incidents.) NJ TRANSIT collects the data. (Amtrak and private bus services are not included in this measure.)

Commuter Rail

Light Rail

The Hudson-Bergen Line is considered on time if it arrives at its final destination within 4 minutes and 59 seconds of its scheduled time. River Line service is considered on time if it arrives at its final destination within 5 minutes and 59 seconds of its scheduled time.

Bus

An NJ TRANSIT bus is considered on time if it departs its terminal within 5 minutes and 59 seconds of its scheduled departure time.
